

Todd Wolfson

Rutgers University

Technology, Capitalism and Cultural Logic of Contemporary Social Movements

Todd Wolfson is an Associate Professor in the Department of Journalism and Media Studies at Rutgers University. He has a Ph.D. in Anthropology and Social and Cultural Foundations of Education from the University of Pennsylvania. Todd is author of Digital Rebellion: The Birth of the Cyber Left and co-editor of the recently published volume The Great Refusal: Herbert Marcuse and Contemporary Social Movements. Todd is also co-founder and board president of Media Mobilizing Project, an organization based in Philadelphia that aims to use media and communications to build the power of poor and working people.

Tuesday March 7, 2017
4:30pm
RAB 204, Douglass Campus